Off Mountain Adventure

If you want a wildlife experience, look no further than the north edge of Jackson at the National Elk Refuge where thousands of elk winter in the refuge. The elk begin their migration out of the high meadows in the fall, usually after the first snowstorm. They stay in the refuge through the spring when food in their higher habitat becomes more abundant.

The sleigh rides into the elk herd are available via a private contractor, Double H Bar, Inc. The National Elk Refuge also offers educational and daily programs at the Jackson Hole and Greater Yellowstone Visitor Center. Please call (307) 733-0277 to book your ride.

Mask Up for Safety

At JHMR, all guests will be required to wear face coverings over both nose and mouth at all times while riding all lifts, when loading, and when standing in lift lines as well as inside facilities. Guests are recommended to wear a dry face covering when possible for the best protection.

Guests also are required to wear face coverings in all other indoor and outdoor public areas, including village common areas, upper mountain common areas, inside all buildings and facilities, in line mazes and, as mentioned above, when loading, riding, and unloading lifts, gondolas, and the aerial tram. The only exceptions are when skiing and riding and when seated for dining. JHMR recommends face coverings be constructed with multi-layer fabric materials. Single layer Buffs, bandanas, gators, scarves and ascots are not recommended.

Kings and Queens of Corbet's

No ski resort in North America has a chute as legendary as Corbet's Couloir. It is a crucible where skiers go to prove their mettle, or more often, to retreat in fear. The run is named for Barry Corbet, a mountaineer who in 1960 spotted a narrow crease of snow shaped like an upside-down funnel, high up on the mountain now known as Jackson Hole. Author Christopher Stenner wrote that Corbet remarked, "Someday someone will ski that."

This invitational event pits 24 of the world's top skiers, riders and select local rippers against each other. As they compete for the title, "King or Queen of Corbet's," each competitor is granted two runs down Corbet's with only the best run counting toward the grand prize.

The 2021 Kings and Queens of Corbet's event is set for February 16-21, 2021. More, updated details can be found at www.jacksonhole.com and following the link to the event.

Intermediate Terrain

Jackson Hole is known for its challenging terrain, but did you know that many rank them highly for terrain variety? Rolling groomers, adventurous kids Stash Parks, and uncrowded long runs are all there also. They have never been complacent at JHMR and in the last few years they prioritized improving the intermediate ski and snowboard experience to give their guests a large variety of terrain to experience.

Mountain Sports School

This winter, Mountain Sports School is prioritizing health and safety through new offerings with more individualized attention, smaller classes and protocols to provide a safe learning environment.
